THE 2025 GENERAL ELECTION

FOREWORD

It is a great achievement for the Electoral Commission (the Commission) to present the Report of the Electoral Commission to the National Assembly on the Number and Boundaries of Constituencies and Wards for the 2025 General Elections (the Report) to the National Assembly for confirmation of the constituency boundaries. This is considered an achievement particularly because periodic and regular review of constituency boundaries is a requirement of the Constitution of the Republic of Malawi and is placed within the mandate of the Commission. It is relevant to mention that the exercise has been implemented by the Commission in a context where there has been no comprehensive review of constituency boundaries since 1998.

Recognizing this mandate, the Commission included this exercise in its Strategic Plan for 2018 to 2022 and set out to undertake a comprehensive review of constituency and ward boundaries for the purposes of the 2025 elections. Throughout the implementation of this exercise, the Commission was cognizant of the parameters of its role and function in as far as determination of number of constituencies and wards and the demarcation of boundaries is concerned. The Commission was guided by the requirement that constituency boundaries must be drawn impartially and that in doing so, the Commission must ensure that constituencies contain approximately equal numbers of voters eligible to register to vote subject to considerations of population density, ease of communication, geographical features and existing administrative boundaries.

Even though this exercise is entirely technical and guided by law, the Commission was aware that the determinations made in this exercise may be perceived to be significantly political with the potential of having an impact on the management, outcome and overall fairness of an election. It is for this reason that the Commission ensured that the process was undertaken in a fair and transparent manner, through active facilitation of full public participation and against criteria clearly defined in the law and communicated to all stakeholders in advance of all determinations. Further, the Commission endeavored to conduct the exercise in an independent and impartial manner and was not, at any point, subjected to any external direction, or undue influence.

It is sincerely hoped that the National Assembly will consider the Report on its merit and within the prescriptions of factors which are provided by the law only and not any other considerations.

Justice Dr. Chifundo Jairus Kachale
CHAIRMAN

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Commission acknowledges the Government of Malawi for making available funds for the activity; with particular gratitude, the extensive and valuable contribution of the members of the Commission, Management and Staff of the Electoral Commission for their respective roles in undertaking this time-consuming and technically tasking exercise. The exercise would not have been undertaken and successfully concluded without their effort and input. The Commission also benefited with sincere appreciation from the input and support of all electoral stakeholders who took time to offer suggestions and proposals to make this exercise successful. Special mention should be made to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) for sponsoring some of the activities which could not be implemented without its support; the and International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES) for technical assistance; the National Statistical Office (NSO) for providing the population data and data sets and the Surveyor General for providing spatial data, maps and seconding staff during the field exercise.

1. INTRODUCTION

This is a report of the Electoral Commission (the “Commission”) to the National Assembly on the review and determination of number and boundaries of constituencies and wards for the purposes of the 2025 General Elections.

It is a requirement of the Constitution of the Republic of Malawi (the “Constitution”) that the National Assembly shall confirm all determinations by the Commission with regard to the drawing up of constituency boundaries. Section 76 (5) (b) stipulates that the National Assembly shall confirm all determinations by the Electoral Commission with regard to the drawing up of constituency boundaries but may not alter the boundaries of any constituency, except upon the recommendation of the Electoral Commission.

2. BACKGROUND

The Commission is mandated by the Constitution to, among other things, determine and review constituency and ward boundaries at intervals of not more than five years.

It must be highlighted that the setting of the interval at five years has a significant purpose which must not be ignored. The five-year intervals are to ensure that the boundaries of constituencies and wards are periodically reviewed to take into account all demographic changes while maintaining approximately equal numbers of voters eligible to register to vote. The last comprehensive review of constituency boundaries was conducted in 1998 in preparation for the 1999 General Elections.

In its approach to the exercise, the Commission recognized that the current constituency boundaries are not in conformity with the Constitution, in that there were significant differences in the size of the population of voters eligible to register to vote across constituencies at council level. For instance, using the population of registered voters for 2019 elections, Rumphu West Constituency had 35,094 compared to Rumphu East which had 11,648. Similarly, in Lilongwe City Council, Lilongwe City Centre Constituency had 124,513 compared to Lilongwe City North which had 59,781. In Chiradzulu, Chiradzulu Central Constituency had 46,738 compared to Chiradzulu West Constituency which had 14,673.

In an effort to rectify these discrepancies, the Commission undertook the constituency and ward boundary review exercise from April 2021 to July 2022. This exercise aimed at facilitating the 2025 General Elections. Using the 2025 projected population of voters eligible to register to vote, the Commission determined the number of constituencies and wards and then set out to determine the constituency and ward boundaries in accordance with the Constitution. In drawing the new boundaries, the Commission collapsed the existing boundaries and came up with new boundaries.

3. COMPOSITION OF THE COMMISSION

The Electoral Commission is a body corporate established under section 75 of the Constitution.¹ The current cohort of the Commission has a membership of seven including the Chairman. The members are as follows²:

¹ Section 75 of the Constitution reads: There shall be an Electoral Commission which shall consist of a Chairman who shall be a judge nominated in that behalf by the Judicial Service Commission and appointed by the president and such other members not being less than six, as may be appointed in accordance with an Act of Parliament.

² The names of the Members, other than that of the Chairman, appear in this Report in order of surnames.

4. MANDATE OF THE COMMISSION

The Commission's general function is to manage the conduct of all elections in Malawi by exercising general direction and supervision over elections³. In addition to these broad functions and powers relating to the conduct of elections as provided under the Constitution and the Electoral Commission Act (ECA), the Commission has the duty to determine constituency boundaries⁴, review existing constituency boundaries⁵, determine number of constituencies and wards for purposes of elections⁶, and undertake the demarcation of boundaries of constituencies and wards⁷.

5. KEY ACTIVITIES UNDERTAKEN

In the implementation of the review and determination of constituency and ward boundaries, the Commission undertook several activities which included study visits to other countries and consultative meetings with different stakeholders including political party leaders, the National Assembly, Civil Society Organisations (CSOs), traditional leaders, the media, academia and religious leaders. This section will focus on the sensitization and public hearing meetings only.

5.1. Sensitization of Stakeholders

The Commission held sensitization meetings with various stakeholders to among other things, inform electoral stakeholders on the approach and methodology of the review of constituency and ward boundaries; inform stakeholders of the implementation plan; and provide an opportunity to stakeholders to seek clarifications, present recommendations and submit

6. DETERMINATION OF NUMBER OF CONSTITUENCIES

6.1. Number of Constituencies

In accordance with section 8 (1) (a) of the ECA, the Commission has the power to determine the number of constituencies and wards for the purposes of elections. This responsibility is the preserve of the Commission¹¹. For the purposes of the 2025 elections, it has been determined by the Commission that the number of constituencies shall be 229. In determining the number of constituencies, the Commission was guided by the requirement of the Constitution that the process must be impartial and that constituencies must contain approximately equal number of voters eligible to register to vote. On the basis of this requirement, the Commission devised a mathematical formula which was employed across all councils.

6.2. Methodology

The methodology adopted by the Commission for determining the number of constituencies per council was formulated with full consideration of the factors provided by the Constitution and the ECA. The Commission devised an articulated mathematical formula for two factors that are capable of being represented by a coherent mathematical model. In terms of the law, the primary factor is the number of voters eligible to register to vote. For the development of the mathematical model, the factors that were mathematically modelled were population and land. All other subsidiary factors that cannot be realistically modelled using the mathematical formula, namely: ease of communication, geographical features as well as existing administrative boundaries, were applied separately in order to determine the final number of constituencies per council.

6.3. Population of Voters Eligible to Register to Vote

The Commission is required to determine constituency boundaries impartially on the basis of ensuring that constituencies contain approximately equal numbers of voters eligible to register to vote.¹² Eligibility to register to vote is provided under section 77 of the Constitution. A person is eligible to register to vote if that person has attained the age of eighteen years or provides proof that on or before the polling day, he or she shall have attained the age of eighteen years¹³. The Commission has used the projected population of people who shall, by law, be eligible to register to vote for the 2025 General Elections. The population projections were provided by the National Statistical Office (the “NSO”) which is mandated by the National Statistics Act, 2013, as a body responsible for the collection, compilation, analysis, abstraction, publication and dissemination of statistical information in Malawi.

¹² See section 76 (2) (a) of the Constitution of the Republic of Malawi.

¹³ See section 4 of the Constitution (Amendment) (No. 5) Act, 2020 amending section 77 of the Constitution to provide that the eligibility to register to vote is attaining the age of 18 at the date of polling.

According to the NSO, the national population of voters eligible to register to vote in 2025 is projected to be 10,957,490. Any data from other sources can be compared with the data from the NSO, provided it is based on the same underlying assumptions used by NSO. The data provided by the NSO included projections up to enumeration area level. This data was shared with stakeholders.

At council level, the projected population of voters eligible to register to vote is presented in Table 1 below:

6.4. Number of Voters and Population Density

Out of the factors mentioned in the Constitution, only population of eligible voters and population density are capable of being modelled using a mathematical formular. Therefore, guided by the requirement that constituency boundaries must be drawn in a manner that ensures that they contain approximately equal number of voters eligible to register to vote, the Commission came up with weighted formular which represents the population of voters eligible to register to vote and the land size of the particular council as a total ratio of ten.

Since the principal factor is the population of voters eligible to register to vote, it has been given a weighting of nine and land size which determines the population density of an area, has been given a weighting of one.

Using this weighting of population of voters eligible to register to vote and the land size, the Commission calculated the initial number of constituencies to be allocated to all councils. Each of the councils was considered separately and not on the basis of the region in which the council is located.

6.5. Other factors

In addition to the constitutional requirement that boundaries must be determined impartially on the basis of ensuring that constituencies contain approximately equal number of voters eligible to register to vote, the Commission is also required to consider other factors provided by the Constitution and the ECA.

The determination of constituency boundaries is subject to the considerations of: -

- (1).Population density;
- (2).Ease of communication;
- (3).Geographical features; and
- (4).Administrative areas.

The Commission has interpreted administrative boundaries to mean local councils. Traditional Authority boundaries do not qualify as administrative boundaries for the purposes of constituency boundaries. However, as a best practice, the Commission has, where it has been found to be suitable to do so, used traditional authority boundaries as constituency boundaries and it has tried to ensure that constituency boundaries have not unnecessarily split traditional authorities to maintain communities of common interest. Where it has been inevitable, some constituency boundaries have traversed traditional authority boundaries. This should not, in any way, be interpreted as dividing the traditional authority since the constituency boundaries are for the purposes of elections and parliamentary representation, only.

6.6. Population Quota

Using the weightings, the Commission calculated the Population Quota of each council. The population quota for each council was calculated by dividing the Total 2025 Projected Council Population of Voters Eligible to Register to Vote by Total 2025 Projected National Population of Voters Eligible to Register to Vote and then multiplied by Nine which is Population Ratio Value.

$$\text{Population Quota (PQ)} = \frac{\text{Total 2025 Council Population of Eligible Registrants} * \text{Population Ratio Value}}{\text{Total 2025 Projected National Population of Voters eligible to register to Vote}}$$

6.7. Land Quota

Using the weightings, the Commission calculated the Land Quota for each council. The land quota for each council was calculated by dividing the Council Land Size in square kilometers by the *Total National Land Size*¹⁴ in square Kilometres and then multiplied by one which is Land Size Ratio Value.

$$\text{Land Quota (LQ)} = \frac{\text{Council Land size} * \text{Land size Ratio Value}}{\text{Total National Land Size}}$$

¹⁴ The data on the Total National Land Size and the Council Land Size was provided by the National Statistics Office.

6.8. Total Quota

The sum of the Population Quota (PQ) and the Land Quota (LQ) gives the Total Quota (TQ) for each council.

$$\text{Total Quota (TQ)} = PQ + LQ$$

6.9. Initial Determined Number of Constituencies Per Council

Given that the number of current constituencies is 193, the Commission made an initial determination of the number of constituencies per Council based on 2025 projected population of voters eligible to register to vote and the land size of the council in relation to the total national land size and the national 2025 projection of the eligible voters. This determination of the initial number of constituencies was made as follows:

$$\text{Calculated Number of Constituencies} = \frac{\text{Total Quota (PQ + LQ)} * \text{Current Number of Constituencies (193)}}{\text{Total Ratio Value (10)}}$$

Therefore:

$$\text{Proposed Number of Constituencies per council} = \frac{\text{Total Quota} * (193)}{10}$$

6.10. Calculated Number of Constituencies per Council

Using the process as outlined above, the Commission determined the initial number of constituencies per council as presented in Table 2 below.

6.11. Additional Factors Used to Determine Number of Constituencies

Table 2 above presents the distribution of the number of constituencies based only on the mathematical formula that gives the number of constituencies with approximately equal number of voters eligible to register to vote subject to population density. The Commission is also required to consider other factors. These factors are: (a) Ease of communication; (b) Geographical features and (c) Administrative areas. Through an elaborate and deliberative process, the Commission applied these factors to determine the number of constituencies per council.

During this process, the Commission also considered all recent declarations and orders that established Towns and Municipal Councils as published in the Gazette to create new and independent constituencies in those councils. The boundaries of the constituencies in such councils are the council boundaries. This is to ensure that constituency boundaries do not traverse local council boundaries.

6.12. Determined Number of Constituencies

Following the process outlined above in sections 6.10 and 6.11 the Commission determined the final number of constituencies per council as presented in Table 3 below.

7. DETERMINATION OF BOUNDARIES

Following the determination of the number of constituencies, the Commission proceeded to determine the constituency boundaries in accordance with the Constitution. The determination of constituency and ward boundaries is a function given to the Commission under the Constitution and the ECA. The Commission made use of physical features such as roads, rivers, mountains, hills and Traditional Authority boundaries in determining constituency and ward boundaries.

After determination of the constituency and ward boundaries, the Commission printed preliminary constituency and ward boundary maps. These maps were displayed at council and Traditional Authority headquarters and all Teacher Development Centres for public viewing from 4th to 17th March 2022. The display of the maps was in advance of the conduct of public hearings.

After the public hearings, the Commission refined the boundaries by considering proposals for adjustments of constituency and ward boundaries on merit and within the parameters of the factors which the Commission is required to consider under the Constitution.

8. COMPLAINTS AND PROPOSALS RECEIVED

Throughout the implementation of the activities of the process, the Commission received complaints and proposals relating to the determination of the number and boundaries of the constituencies and wards. The complaints and proposals received were related to issues of particular councils and questions on the general mandate of the Commission. The Commission considered the complaints and proposals and made the following decisions:

- (i). The number of constituencies shall be 229 as determined and all requests from Councils for an increase in the number of constituencies were resolved by adjusting the preliminary boundaries to ensure that the need for extra constituencies was addressed.
- (ii). All proposals for adjustment of constituency and ward boundaries were considered on merit and within the parameters of the factors which the Commission was required to consider under the Constitution. The boundary adjustments which were made on the preliminary maps were incorporated in the maps to be published after confirmation of the boundaries by the National Assembly.
- (iii). Once the boundaries are confirmed by the National Assembly the Commission shall conduct a comprehensive process of establishing voter registration and polling centres across the country, taking into account the needs of all constituencies for adequate polling centres in conformity with known international best practices for establishment of voter registration and polling centres.

- (iv). The shortcomings of the administration of the Constituency Development Fund (CDF) as raised by many stakeholders during sensitization and public hearing meetings, cannot be resolved by the process of review of constituency and ward boundaries. The concerns of adequacy and equitability of the CDF should be addressed by the National Assembly which is responsible for determining the level and formula for disbursement of CDF.

9. NAMING OF CONSTITUENCIES AND WARDS

The constituencies and wards have been given names which were proposed and agreed on by stakeholders. Where there was no discernible agreement, the Commission has given names to the relevant constituencies and wards based on geographical positioning.

10. CONSTITUENCY AND WARD BOUNDARY DESCRIPTIONS

The boundary descriptions for each constituency and ward appear in the Appendix

11. CONCLUSION

In accordance with section 8 (1) (a) of the ECA, the Commission determined that the number of constituencies shall be 229. The Commission was guided by the constitutional requirement that the process must be impartial and that constituencies must contain approximately equal number of voters eligible to register to vote.

In accordance with the Constitution, the Commission applied an approach that included a mathematical formula which was employed across all councils and considered other factors such as population density, ease of communication, geographical features and administrative areas.

The preliminary maps from the process were displayed in designated areas across the country for public viewing. The display of the maps was followed by public hearings to record and resolve all issues observed by stakeholders on the preliminary maps.

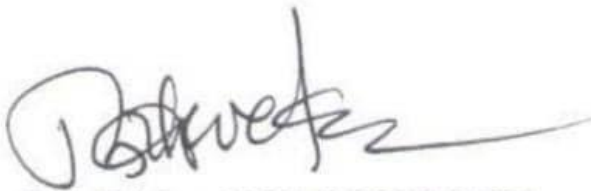

The Commission provided an opportunity to the public to submit proposals and complaints pertaining to the exercise both before and after the boundaries were drawn and circulated for viewing.

The Commission observed that while there were strong views from some stakeholders to reduce the number of constituencies, the majority of stakeholders asked for more constituencies. The Commission reconciled the disconnect between the demand for increased and reduced number of constituencies by maintaining its determined number of constituencies.

The exercise revealed that there is need for legal reform to create a framework on capping the number of constituencies so that only the existing boundaries are periodically and regularly reviewed. The Commission recommends that Parliament should explore a model that balances both needs mentioned above, without compromising the democratic need of representation of the people.

The Commission submits this report to the National Assembly for confirmation of the determinations made by the Commission regarding the boundaries of the constituencies as required under Section 76 (5) (b) of the Constitution.
